A higher TER does not necessarily imply a poor return, nor does a low TER imply a good return. The current TER should not be regarded as an indication of future TERs.

Transaction Costs (TC): This ratio shows the percentage of the value of the fund incurred as costs relating to the buying and selling of the fund's underlying assets. TC are a necessary cost in administering the fund and impacts fund returns. It should not be considered in isolation as returns may be impacted by many other factors over time including market returns, the type of fund, investment decisions of the investment manager and the TER.

Total Investment Charges (TIC): This ratio is simply the sum of the TER and TC, showing the percentage of the value of the fund incurred as costs relating to the investment of the fund. It should be noted that performance figures account for all costs included in the TIC ratio, so you should not deduct the TIC from performance figures, the performance is already net of the TIC.

Fund review

Global markets reached new highs over the quarter, and the fund managed to participate in the rally. Throughout the quarter, market performance broadened, with interest rate plays, real estate and utilities, standing out as the key sectors driving returns. The IT sector underperformed, funding a rotation into more procyclical sectors. Additionally, the market benefited from China's stimulus measures, which focused on fiscal spending and the property market. Not having exposure to the underperforming energy sector (impacted by falling oil prices) helped offset the fund's lack of exposure to Q3's winners, real estate, and utilities. Our relative performance was negatively impacted by the lack of direct exposure to China and more pro-cyclical names, with our stock selection being a detractor. Positive contributions came from companies like Starbucks, which benefited from a new CEO, and Partners and S&P Global, which saw gains due to rate cuts leading to a more favourable credit and market environment. However, these gains were partially offset by weaknesses in Estee Lauder, which we sold over the quarter, Alphabet, which was impacted by regulatory overhang, and Icon Plc, where biopharma hesitancy kept investors cautious.

Market overview

The quarter saw swings and roundabouts but ultimately rate cuts, resilient growth, and the long-awaited Chinese stimulus provided a boost for risk assets. Earlier in the quarter volatility spiked due to recession fears and the unwinding of the Japan carry trade. To put this in perspective, the VIX reached levels above 60, similar to those at the start of the pandemic and the Global Financial Crisis. However, these fears quickly dissipated. Powell delivered a 50 basis point cut, and markets responded positively to the possibility that the Fed could achieve the soft landing investors have been hoping for. The market further benefited from China's stimulus measures, which focused on fiscal spending and the property market. China's support measures included interest rate cuts, more cash for banks, bigger incentives to buy homes, and plans to consider a stock stabilisation fund. According to the OECD, the global economy is settling into newfound stability as the stress of high inflation eases, allowing central banks to cautiously loosen policy. Economic growth has remained resilient in recent months, inflation has continued to moderate, and indicators suggest momentum in services.

Looking ahead

2024 is landmark and potentially seismic year for general elections. Nearly half the world's population, an estimated 3.7 billion people, will have cast their votes in over 70 countries, including the US, the UK, India, and South Africa. In the US, we are heading into a tight, too-hard-to-call race between two very different candidates. A Kamala Harris presidency would represent the status quo, largely continuing the policies seen under Biden. On the other hand, a Trump presidency would bring tax cuts and a more aggressive stance on tariffs and immigration, which could bring near term growth but also potentially worrying upward pressure on inflation. Generally, broader economic developments have a more significant impact on market outcomes than politics. However, there have been instances where election results are critical junctures when market confidence and political actions intersect. The outcome of an election is just one of many factors in our investment process, and its result can be uncertain. Whilst we do not speculate on a particular political outcome, we do assess whether we are taking significant intentional or unintentional political bets. While we are aware of these risks and can adjust, our investment decisions are ultimately driven by a company's bottom-up prospects. Geopolitical fears often lead to sharp, short-term selloffs, typically followed by a relatively quick recovery. These events are inherently difficult to time consistently. In our view, a more reliable and robust approach is to hold a portfolio of the world's best quality compounders. By doing so, we protect our clients' wealth from permanent loss of capital during temporary market noise while generating attractive investment returns over the long run.
