Total Expense	1.48%
Transaction Costs	0.01%
Total Investment Charge	1.49%
1 Year Total Expense	1.48%

Total Expense (TER): This ratio shows the charges, levies and fees relating to the management of the portfolio and is expressed as a percentage of the average net asset value of the portfolio, calculated over the period shown and annualised to the most recently completed quarter. A higher TER does not necessarily imply a poor return, nor does a low TER imply a good return. The current TER should not be regarded as an indication of future TERs.

Transaction Costs (TC): This ratio shows the percentage of the value of the fund incurred as costs relating to the buying and selling of the fund's underlying assets. TC are a necessary cost in administering the fund and impacts fund returns. It should not be considered in isolation as returns may be impacted by many other factors over time including market returns, the type of fund, investment decisions of the investment manager and the TER.

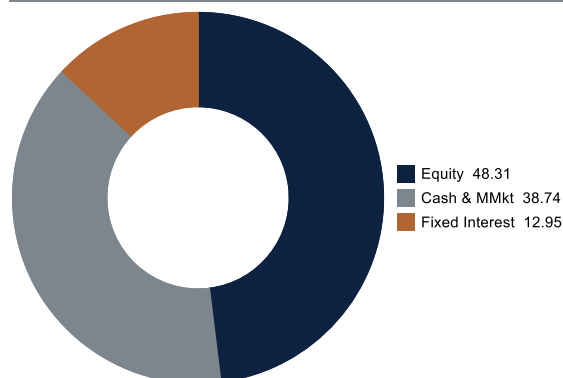

Total Investment Charges (TIC): This ratio is simply the sum of the TER and TC, showing the percentage of the value of the fund incurred as costs relating to the investment of the fund. It should be noted that performance figures account for all costs included in the TIC ratio, so you should not deduct the TIC from performance figures, the performance is already net of the TIC.

Fund review

Over the quarter, the fund returned -1.6%% (Class C) behind a benchmark return of +0.1%. The fund's underperformance was primarily due to the global equity component, with the enhanced income component also lagging the benchmark. Asset allocation detracted from returns being overweight global equity.

Communications services and technology stocks were standout performers over the quarter, with enthusiasm for AI remaining strong. These sectors together with consumer discretionary and financials were the only sectors to deliver a positive return over the quarter. Our allocation effect was slightly positive. Having no exposure to utilities, real estate and energy helped offset our overweight to healthcare which cost us over the quarter. Stock selection was negative over the quarter with healthcare the key detractor.

The Fund's fixed income allocation delivered a positive return, although was slightly shy of the cash benchmark return in the quarter. The duration position is currently 0.6 years, and whilst defensive, is longer than the overnight cash benchmark which has been a slight drag on performance in the short-term. With the outlook for improved growth and sticky inflation set to remain and with little to no pickup in yield due to the flat yield curve out to 5 years, the defensive duration strategy will remain employed.

Market overview

In 2024, global equity markets, led by US indices, experienced significant growth driven by a combination of favourable economic factors. Lower inflation eased cost pressures, enabling businesses to operate more efficiently while boosting consumer purchasing power. Concurrently, a synchronised global interest rate cutting cycle reduced borrowing costs, spurring investment and spending across various sectors. This monetary easing fostered a positive outlook for corporate earnings growth, as companies benefited from reduced financial burdens and increased demand for their products and services.

However, the year ended on a softer note, with Q4 proving to be a weak period for global financial markets due to a stronger dollar and higher US bond yields. This pullback was attributed to market participants reacting to economic data and less dovish signals from the Federal Reserve (Fed) during December's FOMC meeting. While the Fed cut interest rates by 25 basis points (bps), they raised their inflation forecast for the year ahead, indicating fewer interest rate cuts than previously anticipated. Currently, the Fed is forecasting two 25bps cuts for next year, while the uncertainty of Trump's inflationary policies may weigh on the markets in the interim. The overweight positioning and bullish stance on equities leading into December's meeting left the market with little room for disappointment, making it susceptible to volatility.

Looking ahead

The global economic outlook remains positive, driven by monetary easing, credit growth, real wage growth, and productivity gains from AI. The divergence in growth and inflation between the US and the rest of the world is expected to persist, resulting in less aggressive monetary easing in the US compared to Europe, where growth has been lacklustre. Emerging markets look set to face challenges from a strong US dollar, higher for longer global bond yields, a weak Chinese economy, and uncertainties related to a new US administration.

President Trump's policies, such as lower taxes, import tariffs, and the deportation of undocumented immigrants, could add inflationary pressures to an already buoyant US economy. The lack of detailed information and the ultimate implementation of these policies pose several risks to economic growth, likely leading to periods of volatility in global financial markets.

We will continue to monitor developments as they unfold but will maintain our fundamental approach of investing in quality assets that offer significant upside and attractive returns for our clients over the long term. With equity valuations becoming less supportive we are dialling back our overweight equity positioning to neutral.
